Set Assignment Information

Cinema Businesses

Cinema businesses play a large role in the entertainment sector. Cinema businesses give customers the opportunity to watch new release films and productions in a theatre style venue. Cinema businesses are often linked to large, national or international chains, but there has been an increase in independent and local cinemas opening in the last 10 years. The sector is dominated by several large cinema businesses, such as Vue International, Cineworld, PVR and Wanda, which operate in various countries and have multiple sites. Smaller, independent cinema businesses often operate from one location and provide a much smaller range of films.

The international cinema market is valued at around $86.1 billion and is expected to grow by a further 5% each year until 2029. Over the past five years, the sector has seen an increase in the technological influences on operations, with some businesses now offering a range of viewing experiences; 3D, 4D, IMAX and late-night screenings. The change in technology has led to significant growth in the market for cinema businesses, with an estimated 5.7 billion tickets being sold each year across the world. Many larger businesses now offer multiple screenings of films throughout the day, with some operating 24 hours per day. In contrast, many smaller independent cinema businesses have opened for shorter periods of time and offer exclusive, limited edition or one-off cinema experiences. Globally, the focus is on providing premium amenities and experiences, a wider food menu, VIP experiences, lounge seats and member-only options.

The cost-of-living crisis and changes in the economy have had a significant impact on the cinema market. Many businesses have had to adapt their approach to services, products, prices and marketing. Organisations such as Vue International and PVR have changed their pricing strategies to offer simple pricing options and enhanced their theatres to include a greater level of luxury to attract customers. For smaller, independent cinema businesses the challenges have been greater, and many have been unable to continue to operate. Some independent cinema businesses have made adaptations to their theatres, offering new seating, cheaper pricing and 'one-off' showings to target new customers, and many have partnered with other organisations to expand their business and survive.

Scenario

Amara is an experienced business owner and film enthusiast. She has been given the opportunity to buy an existing cinema business in her local area that has been open for the past three years. Amara has very little experience and knowledge of cinema businesses and is worried that it may be a highly competitive market. Amara has tried to carry out research into the sector, but is unsure about the ownership, size and scale of competitors and worries about the long-term success of the new business. Amara has very little awareness of the impacts that the business environment could have on a cinema business and needs some help in understanding what challenges the business may face.

You will need to research two contrasting cinema businesses independently. You could use primary or secondary methods to gather your research or make use of personal experience with local businesses. You may wish to consider researching digital articles, business journals, governmental websites and publications and more general business sources.
